Jubilee Hall plugs in to the sun

Local residents gathered in Mount last weekend to celebrate the installation of solar panels on the Warleggan Jubilee Hall.

The idea started when we had to close our yoga class for the winter because the hall was so cold, said project manager Jasmina Goodair. We are delighted with our cosy new hall and we are very grateful for all the help we have had along the way.

The project was supported by Community Energy Plus, which offers expert advice and helps to find funding for sustainable energy projects in community buildings. The improvements were paid for by EDF energy's Green Fund and the government's Low Carbon Buildings Programme.

The installation was carried out by Penzance based solar panel company Plug into the Sun. Managing director Andy Tanner explained the technology to those present, including local MP Colin Breed, who commented:

It was very helpful to hear an explanation in plain English. Well done to everyone involved in the project, I look forward to seeing many more solar panels on community halls across Caradon.
